ALL DETAILS WERE MOST CAREFULLY PLANNED FOR

FUGITIVES IN PARIS TELL OF THE PRELIMINARY PLANS OF THE REVOLUTIONISTS.

FIGHTING CONTINUES TODAY

Royalist Troops Continue to Attack the Provisional Forces and Bloody Fighting is Reported in Many Localities.

Paris, Oct. 7.—Portuguese revolutionists and republicans who have been compelled to take refuge in Paris, declare the present revolution was insured of success before it started, and they have marveled that it was so long delayed.

The king has been almost without support since he took the throne. Anarchism has grown to an alarming extent. The republicans have fought Manuel always and the clericals have plotted against him because of his opposition to the establishment of further clerical orders.

Plot after plot against the king has been discovered and his life has always been menaced. When he rode in King Edward's funeral procession in London it was remarked that a look of terror that had been on his face since the tragedy which had made him king had never disappeared. Almost nightly armed men had been arrested in the shadow of the Necker bridge.

Even the viceroy had been ordered to warn Manuel that he was in danger. In May, giving information that the king had been arrested, the king's body which had been arrested in Madrid, was really intended for the Portuguese king. Side by side with the anarchists, the revolutionary societies which plotted not only against the king, but the state, had grown in strength, most of them armed. Men of high repute and business standing had joined these societies. But others have had their bomb factories.

Manuel had been king for two years and seven months, but it was doubtful if he had had a peaceful moment, even in times when he was in foreign countries looking for a rich royal bride whose money might be used in bolstering up his throne. In England the look of terror never left his face, while there it was known he was in deadly danger, for the headquarters of the anarchists, his bitterest enemies, were located in Paris.

Manuel became king on the assassination of his father and brother on Feb. 26, 1908. The royal family consisted of King Carlos, his son the Crown Prince, Prince Manuel, and Queen Maria. Just before the assassination, Manuel was in Lisbon with a group of men, and the crown prince fell dead.

Manuel, who was his father's mother, was wounded in the face and arm. Five of the assassins were shot down on the spot, while several others were arrested.

Following Manuel being declared king, his sons were over active. The royal family of Portugal owed $5,000,000 to the state. The sum was vastly increased by the king's enemies and debt-ridden Portugal, needing the money, hated the king.

The Portuguese population consists of 200 aristocrats and about 5,000,000 common people. The aristocracy has robbed the common people for hundreds of years, squeezing out practically every cent the common people had. No country had more poverty than Portugal.

It is this which caused the growing feeling of discontent. In spite of his starving subjects, Manuel maintained seven royal palaces in extravagant style.

Only last June Manuel indicated his desire to abdicate in favor of his uncle, Infante Alfonso, duke of Oporto, but it was pointed out to him that such action would surely be followed by a revolution that would make Portugal a republic.

Immediately before Manuel became king, Senor Franco, King Carlos' premier, made himself dictator. Manuel kept Franco as premier, but revoked his dictatorial powers. This gave the king a measure of republican support, but made him hated by the clericals who opposed any concession that tended toward republicanism.

Then Franco was forced to resign and flee the country. The ministry which succeeded carried out the constitution, but the unrest continued. Last August, Lisbon papers reported an alleged plot to depose Manuel, because of his liberal policy toward the enemies of the church. Portugal is a Catholic country opposed to the clericals, who have grown rich off the government's bounty, while the people starved. Meanwhile, republicans themselves were not content with Manuel's liberal policy and the boy ruler was caught between two fires. Each side armed for strife. Each planned to win out the royal family the clericals expecting to place another on the throne while the republicans expected to start a republic.

It is recognized, however, that the Portuguese Republic virtually recognized today by the foreign diplomats, an understanding was made that the royal family will be barred from the country. The personal property of the royal family, however, will be respected, it is stated.

PECULIAR PHRASE IN THE PLATFORM

Of the Republican Party Due to Conditions at the State University.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 7.—Like did a group of University of Wisconsin boys dream last spring that their agitation for the adoption of a "free speech" clause by the regents would within three short months become the subject of a clause in a political party platform and take on nation-wide significance. The Republican platform made here last week contains the following words in a clause laudatory of the university's achievements:

"We recognize that the university's service to the state, through investigations in agriculture, industry and social institutions, depends upon its freedom to find the truth and make it known. And we pledge the Republican party to the policy of academic freedom so well expressed by the board of regents in 1894, when it declared, 'Whatever may be the limitations which trammeled inquiry elsewhere, we believe that the great state university of Wisconsin should ever encourage that continual and fearless sifting and winnowing by which alone the truth can be found.'"

These words on a memorial tablet and offered it to the university. The tablet was rejected by the regents, ostensibly to keep the campus from becoming a "graveyard." The charge has continually been made, however, that the real reason is in the fact that on the board of regents are members who are hostile to the policy of conservation of which President Van Hise and other university leaders are devoted disciples. President Van Hise is chairman of the Wisconsin section of the National Conservation Congress, to which he was appointed at the recent St. Paul meeting. He has just published a book on conservation in the United States, and in other ways has manifested an intelligent interest in the whole land and forest policy.

Chicago, Oct. 7.—Not since the days when horse racing was in its glory in Chicago has the old Hawthorne Park grounds been the scene of such lively activity as was to be witnessed today. Aviators of national and international reputation, assisted by a small army of skilled mechanics were busy at work tuning up and trying out the various flying machines entered for the great aeroplane flight from Chicago to New York. It was the final day of preparation for the start of place tomorrow if the weather permits.

Nearly a dozen competitors are expected to start in the great flight that will bring a large cash prize and everlasting renown to the winner. Included among the entries are such well-known names as Charles K. Hamilton, Eugene B. Ely, J. A. D. McCurdy, Charles F. Willard, Ted Shriver, Joe Seymour, "Topsy" O'Hagan and P. W. Wilcox.

Should the weather conditions tomorrow prove unfavorable the start of the race will of course be postponed. The conditions governing the contest provide that the race may be postponed from day to day on account of bad weather, but not beyond October 15. The race must be completed within seven days and no limit is placed on the number of stops. In order to qualify for the race each entrant must have a record of one hour's continuous flight, and must finish in the machine in which he starts, but may make any necessary repairs. If the competitors start simultaneously the winner shall be he who, fulfilling the conditions of the race, first lands within the limits of New York City. If the competitors start at intervals the intervals will be taken into account in determining the winner. About the successful competitors will be divided cash prizes aggregating nearly $30,000.

WARNING GIVEN TO PREVENT FIRE LOSS

State Fire Marshal Makes Suggestions for Lessening Number of Fires Through Carelessness.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., Oct. 7.—State Fire Marshal T. M. Purcell today issued a warning in the form of suggestions for the reduction of fire loss during the winter months.

"In the last annual report issued by this department," said the fire marshal, "attention was called to the fact that there had been a half million dollars' loss suffered throughout the state during 1909 through the partial or total destruction of dwellings and contents. It was further shown that more than 50 per cent of this loss was due directly to the heating apparatus. I wish to impress upon the public that practically all of this loss is traceable to preventable causes which by a little care, precaution and inspection, could be almost entirely removed."

"During the season of the year just beginning, furnaces, stoves, fireplaces, etc., are started and in most cases this is done without any cleaning of flues or inspection having been done. Every property-owner should make a careful inspection of all chimneys to see that there has been no settling which caused cracks or other openings and to see that all openings are properly protected by metal caps, as it is a common practice during the summer months to remove the caps to cover the openings with chess cloth and wall paper. A very small expense at this time of the year for inspection and careful cleaning of chimneys will save a large property loss during the next few months."

"Examination of the furnace room should be made to see that no wooden partition which is not protected comes close to the sides, back, or top of the furnace. Wooden partitions which come closer than eighteen inches should be protected by asbestos board. Stove pipes which pass through wooden floors or partitions should be protected by thimbles which are at least an inch larger in diameter than the pipes."

"Another very common hazard is caused by the dumping of ashes on wooden floors, against wooden partitions or in wooden boxes. Fire has been known to smoulder in this way for weeks, finally to break out at a time when no one was present to detect it. Ashes should be dumped only in metal or cement receptacles unless it is done outside of and away from any building."

"All dried leaves and other rubbish which is so easily ignited by sparks should be cleaned out of eave-troughs and cornices."

CONSIDER METHODS OF BOOMING SOUTH

Several Thousand Delegates Are Attending Big Commercial Congress in Atlanta.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 7.—Several thousand delegates representing sixteen Southern States filled the Auditorium this morning at the opening of the big convention called by the Southern Commercial Congress to discuss plans for further advancing the development of the South. Present at the opening session were the governors of several States, representatives in Congress, prominent railroad officials, manufacturers and business men heads of agricultural colleges and numerous others who were drawn together by their common interest in the welfare and industrial development of the South.

The immense Auditorium was handsomely decorated with the national colors and presented a most attractive appearance.

E. L. Worsham, State entomologist of Georgia, in calling the gathering to order, explained the object of the congress to be to discuss the broad topic of conservation, together with such subjects as agricultural education, forestry, immigration, etc., and to devise means of advertising the natural wealth of the South and disseminating data on the best methods of development of its resources.

An invocation by Dr. C. H. Wilmer, pastor of St. Luke's church, was followed by addresses of welcome by Governor Joseph M. Brown, of Georgia and Mayor Robert F. Muddox, of Atlanta.

With the conclusion of the opening formalities and the exchange of greetings the congress took up the regular program of addresses and discussions. The first speaker on the program was Gifford Pinchot, former chief forester of the United States, who was heard on the subject of the "Principles of Conservation." Mr. Pinchot's address was listened to with close attention by the large assemblage and his remarks were frequently interrupted by applause. He was followed by Charles S. Barrett, president of the Farmers' Union, who explained the interest of the farmers in the conservation movement and the plans for industrial development.

Dr. B. N. Baker, president of the National Conservation Congress, was the presiding officer at the afternoon session. The speakers and their subjects included the following: "Soils," Dr. W. J. McGee, soil-water expert of the United States department of agriculture; "Conservation in Agriculture," Dr. A. M. Soule, president of the Georgia State Agricultural College, and "Minerals of the Southeastern States," Dr. C. Willard Hayes, chief geologist of the United States geological survey.

Tomorrow will be the big day of the congress, with Colonel Theodore Roosevelt as the chief speaker. Colonel Roosevelt will arrive in the city about 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and will address the congress at the evening session. He will be heard on the subject of the conservation of natural resources.

GOVERNOR EVEN TELEPHONED THAT HE HAS BUT AN HOUR TO LIVE.

DAVIDSON NOT FRIGHTENED

Dietz Tried to Run Away Last Night—Has Refused the Terms Offered by Governor and Fighting Will Be Resumed.

(By Associated Press.)

Madison, Wis., Oct. 7.—Letters carrying a skull and cross-bones in red and black, threatening the life of Gov. Davidson unless he instructs Sheriff Madden of Winter to discontinue his campaign to capture John Dietz have been received at the executive office. Even Phoned.

Last night while at home with his family he received a message giving him just one hour to live. "The letters are regarded as those of 'cranks' and were turned over to Chief of Police Shaugnessy."

Refuses to Talk.

"The governor refused to divulge the contents of the message nor tell where they came from, except to say they came 'from all over.'"

May Have Guard.

It is said one came from Chicago. It is fairly possible a guard will be thrown around the executive mansion tonight and that extra precautions against entrance of "cranks" will be taken at the executive office in the capitol.

Is Not Afraid.

While the executive entertains no fear that these threats will be carried out, he is annoyed by the possibility that anarchists in Chicago, from where messages have been received, may be interested in the situation. For this reason it may be deemed advisable for the local police to guard the executive mansion.

Blame Papers.

Governor Davidson feels that certain newspapers, particularly in Minneapolis, have created false sentiment in the Dietz case by making Dietz a hero, and that the newspapers may be laid the blame for the threatening messages.

At Winter.

Winter, Wis., Oct. 7.—It is stated that Dietz offered to surrender if all the charges against him are dropped except the Hotel shooting, and that he is willing to stand trial on that.

Letters containing threats of violence, it is said, have been received by Sheriff Madden and other county officers.

Attorney General Gilbert and Col. O. G. Munson, Davidson's secretary, held a second conference with Dietz at noon when Dietz refused the terms offered by Governor Davidson's representatives and Deputy Thornbarn was told by the sheriff "to do his duty." This means fighting will begin again.

Myra Dietz Sitter.

Ashland, Wis., Oct. 7.—Myra Dietz is out of all danger, according to physicians in charge of St. Joseph's hospital in this city. They say the girl's splendid physical condition insures a speedy and complete recovery. She was given her mail this morning, but asked no word of her besieged parents.

Tried to Escape.

Hayward, Wis., Oct. 7.—Well armed John Dietz made a bold attempt Thursday night to break through the cordon of deputies and make his escape through the woods, according to a private telephone report received here today.

Dietz was discovered at the edge of the clearing and stopped, says the report. He refused to surrender, though a number of rifles were drawn upon him at close range, and he dropped his gun and ran back to the cabin. The deputies refrained from shooting desiring to take Dietz alive if possible.

CENTER AVENUE WORST STREET IN WISCONSIN

SAYS PATHFINDER M. C. MOORE OF RELIABILITY RUN.

TESTIMONY FOR DEFENSE

In Action Against City Officials Was Also Offered by President Edden of Janesville Auto Club.

M. C. Moore of Milwaukee, publisher of the "Wisconsin Motorist" and "Pathfinder" who laid out the route for the reliability run out of Milwaukee on May 18, last, testified on the witness stand in circuit court this morning that in all the municipalities traversed last spring no street so bad as Center avenue, Janesville, Wis., for so many blocks, was encountered. The automobile passed through Monroe, Madison, Baraboo, Portage, La Crosse, Kaukauna, Chippewa Falls, Wausau, Oshkosh, Stevens Point, Fond du Lac, Oconomowoc, and numerous other cities, large and small.

The road, he said, was full of depressions and holes and near the freight depot it was necessary to veer from the center of the roadway, even beyond the telephone poles. "Then why," demanded Attorney Charles H. Edden, who with John Cunningham, represents the complainant, John J. Kelly, in this action in perpetually suing the mayor and "council" on that thoroughfare and compel them to reimburse the word fund for the money already expended, "did you not take Main, Locust, Academy, Cherry, or Lincoln street—all of which run parallel?"

Dr. Edden on the Stand.

Dr. Edden testified on the stand that he was president of the Janesville Automobile club.

Attorney Cunningham: "That disqualifies him!"

Attorney Pierce: "I object! By his own admission he is incompetent to testify in any court of justice. Now I drive good horses."

Attorney Nolan: "WHEN?"

Atty. Pierce: "I'll show you, Nolan, if you want to take a spin with me some Sunday."

Court Stenographer Grant: "Just a moment gentlemen—the ink's run out."

Dr. Edden was presently permitted to say that Center avenue before it was repaved was, in his opinion, the worst and largest collection of bumps and holes in the city of Janesville, though the south end, from Western avenue north for a block and a half was not so bad.

Chief Klein's Lesson.

H. C. Klein, chief of the fire department, testified that he had been almost thrown out of his rig on one fire run over the street in question and that he had since avoided it whenever possible. On one occasion he spoke to an alderman regarding the condition of the highway and had learned his lesson so well that he had since refrained from criticizing any street, except under compulsion. "When pressed for an explanation of this alleged situation," he declared that he lodged a protest against hauling in mud and gravel to fix up the street and that the alderman said in reply would not "look well" in print. He admitted that it was one of the city's main thoroughfares and it's the worst. Even at the present time the street was in bad shape from Pleasant street to the brow of the hill at Clinton street. Attorney Pierce wanted to know if from 1857 down to the present time the witness had ever heard of anybody ever filing a claim of damages for injuries sustained on the highway and inquired if he was going fast when he met with his "frightful experience."

City Engineer Testified.

City Engineer C. V. Korch testified to the manner in which the grade of the street in question was established; to the necessity in highway construction of using some waterproof surfacing to make even repairs lasting; and to the fact that crushed stone was quite generally used in such repairs.

Contractor J. P. Mulvey, who laid a sewer along part of the thoroughfare in 1909, testified that layers of rubble and crushed stone were encountered in the work, showing that Center avenue was something more than a "dirt road" when the repairs were commenced.

John E. Behrendt, who was city inspector at the time, corroborated this testimony.

Aldermen Questioned.

Alderman Donahoe testified that he owned no property on Center avenue, though he had lived there for eight years. He said that the effort to repave the road was undertaken in good faith and that it was deemed necessary to crown it so that the water would drain to the gutters. Witness admitted under cross-examination that he might have given Street Commissioner Proctor to understand that he was to go ahead with the work until someone stopped him, even after the mayor had said it ought to be discontinued.

Alderman Dulin said that filling had to be done to get the highway into any kind of shape and that he told the street commissioner to use rubble, the cheapest material he could get, in lieu of crushed stone as soon as it came to his knowledge that crushed stone was being used. The work in his opinion did not in any way exceed the limit of "repairs."

The defense rested and after the plaintiff had called the street commissioner to the stand again for a question or two, the arguments commenced.

CHANGES IN DATES OF TEAM SCHEDULE

Cancellation of Contest With Beloit Has Necessitated Re-arrangement of J. H. S. Football Games.

The cancellation of the two games which the Janesville high school football team was to have played with the Beloit high school eleven, has necessitated a change in the schedule of the local squad. There will be no game here tomorrow, but next Saturday Jefferson high school will play here. Beloit, who had a home in his left hand broken, expects to be able to play on that date. On October 22, when the Janesville team was to have played Whitewater high school at Whitewater, they will go to Delavan to meet the squad from the Deaf and Dumb school. The game at Whitewater will occur on Nov. 12, the day on which the Janesville players were to have played against Beloit at Beloit. A number of the athletes expect to go to Beloit tomorrow to see the contest the Plattville Normals have with Beloit college.

BURNING OF HAY FIELD CAUSES LAW DISPUTE.

Case Heard Before Justice Talmann—Decision Will Be Rendered Tomorrow.

In Justice Talmann's court yesterday afternoon, the suit of Martin Joyce against Martin Conlon, for the burning of a hayfield on the Joyce farm on July 4, which Conlon was alleged to have been responsible for, was heard, and the decision of the justice on the case will be rendered tomorrow morning at nine o'clock. The damages asked are about one hundred dollars. Joyce and Conlon reside across from each other on the Johnson road. The allegation is made that Conlon, while working for the road commission, cut an amount of brush and piled it in front of the Joyce place on July 4. When set fire on that day, it is claimed, the fire spread to the grass in the yard and from there to Joyce's hay field. The plaintiff in the case was represented by Attorney E. E. Carpenter and the defendant by Charles W. Reeder.

SAYS GABY DESLIS WAS IN JANESVILLE

Woman Who Tempted King Manuel of Portugal to His Downfall Appeared Here With "Brown of Harvard."

Advanced Manager Waggoner of Henry Woodruff, stated last evening that the Gaby Deslis, mentioned in the dispatches from Portugal, as the woman who indirectly caused the downfall of that monarch, appeared in Janesville with the "Brown of Harvard" company several years ago. She was then known as Margaret Palmer according to Mr. Waggoner, who says that Mr. Woodruff knows her very well and even received a letter from her from Lisbon this last summer. She took the name of Deslis when she went into vaudeville and went abroad with a party of what was known as "Whirlwind Dancers" to Paris, where Manuel met her.

DISTRICT MEETING OF W. R. C. HELD IN JANESVILLE TODAY

Nearly 200 Delegates Here Today for Convention of District No. 5—Local Corps Inspected.

Delegates from eight corps, representing Janesville, Monticello, Shullsburg, Brodhead, Monroe, Beloit, Sharon and Clinton, to the number of about two hundred, are in the city for the district convention of District No. 5 of the Woman's Relief Corps of Wisconsin. The meetings are being held in the dance hall of the Odd Fellows' block.

Mrs. Sophia Strathorn of Kaukauna, Wis., department president, has charge of the convention and conducted the inspection of the local corps this afternoon. Most of the delegates arrived this morning, the last of them arriving about eleven o'clock, and in order to start the meetings early, dinner was served in the dining rooms of Odd Fellows' hall at half past eleven o'clock.

Commencing at one o'clock sharp, the business of the convention was taken up. The hall where the sessions occurred was tastefully decorated in honor of the visitors. Mrs. Emma Winslow having charge of the work of adopting it. Potted plants, flowers and bouquets of chrysanthemums adorned the desks of the officers, and large flags in standards were placed about the room. Smaller flags and autumn leaves were tastefully arranged about the walls and the balcony of the orchestra stand was wound with bunting.

The inspection of W. H. Sargent Corps, No. 21, of this city, by Mrs. Strathorn, was the first business, and then the time was devoted to a program, in which all corps represented took part, each corps having been asked to give two numbers.

THE BENEFITS OF BETTER STREET LIGHTING.

To discourse upon the benefits of an improvement of such manifest and numerous advantages as good public lighting may seem like a waste of words. A good story, however, will always bear repeating, and the dissemination of knowledge necessitates "line upon line and precept upon precept." Hereafter as it may sound, a popular form of government is not without its disadvantages, chief among which is the fact that public improvements must await the education of the majority of voters up to a full realization of the benefits to be derived. Science has progressed with such rapid strides in the past half century that public education can barely keep pace, with the results that affairs which are managed by public officials frequently lag behind the best practices shown in private enterprises. This constitutes one of the most valid objections to government control of functions which do not clearly and distinctly belong to the essential purposes of government.

A conspicuous example of private enterprise outstripping public administration of affairs is shown in the movement for better street lighting, which has spread over the entire country with astonishing rapidity during the past year. The majority of the new installations are due wholly or in part to private funds; and it is perfectly safe to assume that private funds would not be expended for public utilities unless the benefits to be derived were unquestionable and adequate.

A movement which has become so general and attracted so much attention in a brief space of time is well worth careful study. A brief review of the situation from the various viewpoints may therefore be opportune. We may begin with the more practical aspects, and consider better street lighting first.

As a Profitable Investment.

Generally speaking, the value of property on a business street is directly proportional to the number of people who make use of the street as a thoroughfare. A corner lot on Broadway is worth more than a lot in the heart of subdivision on Long Island simply and solely because a greater number of people pass the Broadway corner during the day. It not infrequently happens that opposite sides of a street on the same block have considerably different values, due to the same cause. Anything which adds to the traffic of a given street must, therefore, add to the value of the abutting property. While conditions of accessibility to necessary utilities, such as railway stations, hotels, banks, public buildings, etc., have doubtless a preponderating influence in determining the traffic of a street, it is equally true that no subsidiary condition has such a vitally effect as the lighting.

A Western city has a long open square in the center of its business section, which naturally affords a prominent location for business. It happens that one side of this square has been brilliantly lighted up, mostly by private enterprise. As a result, nine-tenths of the pedestrians in the evening take that side of the square, with the result that it is far more valuable as a business location than the opposite side. The merchants on one of the main business streets of a large Eastern city saw that the bulk of traffic failed to pass them in the natural course of business; they installed a brilliant system of street lighting, and forthwith their street became the center of attraction; and similar instances can be cited in numerous other cities. It would, of course, be absurd to expect to create a popular business street out of a thoroughfare lying far beyond the natural limits of traffic; but there is no question that any street directly tributary to a business thoroughfare can be fully doubled in value by the installation of spectacular lighting.

In a more general way, lighting the entire business section of a city up to the standards of modern plumbing does for the city, as a whole, what the lighting of a particular street does for that section; it increases values by increasing the traffic; not only for the city itself, but from the surrounding country and nearby towns. That good light increases the value of residential streets by making them more desirable needs no argument. Good street lighting, more than any other thing, gives to a city an air of progressiveness and prosperity. "Nothing succeeds like success," to appear prosperous is the first step to being prosperous.

As a Sanitary Measure.

It would doubtless be stretching the argument to claim that better street lighting would directly add to the healthfulness of the street. The power of suggestion in influencing action, however, is no mere fancy; there is no denying the fact that one improvement suggests another. Asphalt pavement has produced clean streets, not merely because it is easier in itself to clean than cobblestones, but because of its much more elegant appearance; it shows more strikingly the offensive mass of filth and neglect. The same reasoning applies with greater force to the lighting of a street. Not only will well lighted streets be kept cleaner, as a matter of mere inclination, but will be less littered and abused. There is extremely little wanton destruction or injury to property of any kind. Such cases arise mostly from thoughtlessness or association, and not only will good street lighting be an incentive to keeping the streets clean and sanitary, but will further react upon the residents themselves with a wholesome influence to cleanliness.

As an Incentive to Civic Pride.

It has been truly said that in popular government, abuses are the penalty of neglect on the part of the governed. Civic pride is the surest step toward better municipal government. Anything which adds to the general attractiveness of the city, excites interest in its affairs, and fosters public spirit and civic pride. Every citizen should be able to "point with pride to his own city; but how shall he do this when he sees such a woeful deficiency as poor public lighting? He may not be able to pass upon the relative merits of its public library, or the architecture of its public buildings, but public lighting is a thing so conspicuous and evident in a nature that there is no escaping the odium of an unfavorable comparison.

Of all things, then, let us have our cities well lighted. LIGHT UP AND KEEP lighted up.—Adv.

THE OIL SUPPLY.

Fear is often expressed that the world's oil supply is rapidly being exhausted and that gasoline, one of the by-products, now so extensively used, would soon be out of the market. So far from this being the case, the fact is that the supply of crude oil is today so far in excess of demands that the market is glutted and prices are already weakening. The following statement from the Standard Oil company is enlightening:

"Replying to questions concerning prices and competition in the oil business, the Standard Oil company has made public the following statement of conditions:

"During the last three years, the world's production of crude oil has been increasing at a rate far in excess of the increase in the world's consumption of kerosene or refined oil. In 1906 the production of crude petroleum was 312,000,000 barrels. In 1909 the production was 304,000,000 barrels, an increase of 8,000,000 barrels. The increase in the crude oil production in the United States during the same period was 60,000,000 barrels, or two-thirds of the entire world's increase. The world's refined oil (kerosene) business in 1906 was 48,000,000 barrels and in 1909 was 53,000,000 barrels, an increase of 5,000,000 barrels.

"These figures show that while the world's production of crude oil has increased from 1906 to 1909 by 42%, the world's consumption of refined oil (kerosene) has only increased by 10%.

"While it is true that during the past three years a very large market in the United States has been created for oil as fuel, still even with this added outlet for crude oil the stocks are increasing rapidly and at the present time in the United States alone there is held in tankage by the Standard Oil company and others a stock of over 115,000,000 barrels.

"It must be borne in mind that in selling oil for fuel there is an enormous waste of valuable products contained in the crude oil, fuel oil as marketed today in the United States being practically crude oil from which only the highly inflammable light ends have been extracted. Were the fuel oil now being sold refined in the customary manner, there would be obtained from it in addition to refined oil, lubricating oil, paraffine wax and other valuable by-products.

"Notwithstanding this enormous over-production of crude oil, today there have been floated during the past six or seven months, upon the English and European markets, over seventy new oil companies, which have been promoted for the purpose of exploiting and developing new petroleum fields located all over the world. It is a foregone conclusion that only a very few of these companies will ever successfully reach the actual producing stage, or in any way become even small factors in the world's petroleum business; for it is not to be expected that any of the already established petroleum companies will be willing to step aside and make room for such new production as might be developed by some of these new companies.

"In view of the conditions and circumstances as explained above, the Standard Oil company has inaugurated a campaign to increase the world's consumption of refined oil. The level of prices for refined oil today in the United States is lower than at any time during recent years, and as a direct result of these prices the consumption of refined oil in this country is increasing. The same policy is now being actively pursued abroad, especially in the Far East with its enormous population, there exists an unusual opportunity of increasing consumption of refined oil, and in order to accomplish this considerable reductions in prices, not only in the East, but also in Europe, have already been made."

THE NEW REPUBLIC.

The dethronement of King Manuel, and the establishment of the new republic in Portugal has occupied the center of the stage for the past few days and the outcome will be watched with interest.

The responsibility of self-government is a grave responsibility which is never appreciated by people who have always been governed by a crowned head. Questions are constantly arising which demand most intelligent action and a disposition to work together for the common good.

Our own government, the strongest republic in the world, has not yet passed the experimental stage and it is still an open question whether we would not be better off with a mild monarchial form of government.

Colonel Roosevelt was known as the "Czar" during his administration, and the hold which he gained upon the people continues to crown him as the recognized leader on questions of public policy.

This concentration of authority is of the nature of empire rule, and in the case of Roosevelt, is popular with the American people. The new republic of Portugal will be confronted with many surprises.

A dispatch from Springfield, Ill., makes the following announcement: "The commission in charge of the Illinois Hall of Fame at Champaign has decided that the late Philip D. Armour be entitled to recognition, owing to his services in promoting the livestock industry in the United States. The date of the admission of his name will be fixed later. The name of James N. Brown, first president of the board of agriculture, will be admitted on Jan. 25, 1911, and that of Isaac Funk in 1912. It is probable Mr. Armour will be given recognition in 1913."

If Mr. Armour knew that the business he established, and now conducted by his son, was under the ban for alleged conspiracy, it might be occasion for worry. The charges, however, are yet to be proved, and the chances are that the good name will remain unblemished.

Crude begins crime the same as suicide invites a man to self-destruction.

tion. The successful dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times building has fired the brain of red-handed anarchy, and similar deeds of violence may be expected. District Attorney Wayman, the fearless Chicago prosecutor, has been warned of a plot to blow up his residence at Longwood.

Investigation now being made shows that 500 pounds of dynamite was shipped to Los Angeles, and that the "Times" building was but one of half a dozen marked for destruction. The city is thoroughly aroused and no efforts are being spared to run down the assassins.

"The city of Des Moines, Iowa, is an enterprising city and all sorts of schemes are used for advertising purposes. The latest is a pie-eating contest in which four prominent business men challenge all comers to a bout for the honor."

Cooked in Quicklime.

Occasionally the English railway section hand cooks a rabbit without the aid of a fire. All he does is to cover it with a thick crust of clay and immerse it in quicklime. In about 20 minutes he takes it out, cracks the clay (which has baked hard) and inside is his meat done to a turn.

THE POET PHILOSOPHER

By WALT MASON.

(Copyright, 1909, by George M. Shaw Adams.)

Let us labor in the morning, for still soon he afternoon; let us hustle in the evening, for the night is coming soon.

OF YOUTH, when the old and weary dotards sit beside the fire and croon—and time is marching on. Let's improve the golden moments that await upon their way; there'll be time for idle dreaming in old age's watery day; while the men of life is with us let us put up lots of hay, for time is marching on. I have seen a county poorhouse where the paupers shivered then, when high carnival they kept, when they held their late carnival while the weary toilers slept, and time is marching on. I have seen dead people planted without sign of tears or truth; they were hustled to the graveyard like a box of junk, in such; and they always were the people who had fooled away their youth; and time is marching on. Ah, in youth the golden moments seem a boundless, endless store, and we waste them as the children waste the pelicans on the shore! One by one the moments leave us, and they come to us no more, and time is marching on!

Let's improve the golden moments that await upon their way; there'll be time for idle dreaming in old age's watery day; while the men of life is with us let us put up lots of hay, for time is marching on. I have seen a county poorhouse where the paupers shivered then, when high carnival they kept, when they held their late carnival while the weary toilers slept, and time is marching on. I have seen dead people planted without sign of tears or truth; they were hustled to the graveyard like a box of junk, in such; and they always were the people who had fooled away their youth; and time is marching on. Ah, in youth the golden moments seem a boundless, endless store, and we waste them as the children waste the pelicans on the shore! One by one the moments leave us, and they come to us no more, and time is marching on!

OPENING MEETING PROMISES TO BE AN EXCITING ONE

Twilight Club's Program for Next Tuesday includes McGovern and Baneroff as Speakers.

Chairman Nolan promises to make the opening supper and evening of the Twilight club one long to be remembered. The subject, "Politics," alone is enough to start something, but when such speakers as P. E. McGovern, the republican nominee for governor, and foremost progressive in the state, is invited to speak on his side of the question, and Judge Levi Baneroff, who was chairman of the Taft conservative convention in Milwaukee last June, has accepted an invitation to speak for the conservative republicans, it is certain that the meeting will be a most interesting one. As the speakers, Mr. Nolan has also invited Victor Berger, the social democratic leader of Milwaukee, to take up his side of the question and it is probable he will accept. There will also be one of the leading movers in the cause of county option present and a good democratic speaker to look after that party's interests. Taking it all in all it is a program that will attract attention and it is safe to say that not a member of the club will be absent when the speaking begins.

CONSERVATIONISTS IN SOUTH
First Congress Opins at Atlanta With Large Attendance.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 7.—The first conservation congress to be held in the south opened here today with an attendance and enthusiasm that gave promise of success for the movement as it affects this part of the union. Several states in the south now have organizations of one kind or another which are interested in the wise utilization of natural resources and the prevention of waste, cost of living, pure food and good roads problems, and a number of state conservation associations were formed today.

Governor Brown of Georgia, opened the first session and his address of welcome was followed by one by Mayor R. F. Maddox of Atlanta. The speakers of the day included Clifford Pluchot, who spoke on "The Principles of Conservation," and Charles S. Barrett, president of the Farmers' union, on "The Conservation of Farm Resources." The last session, tomorrow, will be made notable by addresses by Theodore Roosevelt and Governor-elect Hoke Smith. Other prominent men on the list of speakers are Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, Chief Forester Henry S. Graves, Chief Geologist C. Willard Hayes, Dr. W. J. McGee, soil expert of the department of agriculture; B. N. Baker, retiring president of the National Conservation congress, and a number of southerners who have been active in the conservation movement.

ARRAIGN WRECKED CAR CREW.

McKinley Line Employees Charged With Criminal Carelessness.
Carlinville, Ill., Oct. 7.—Motorman Jernman and Conductor Leonard, in charge of the northbound car on the McKinley line which ran by a siding north of Stanton Tuesday, causing a wreck in which 37 were killed, were arraigned before Judge Homer here. They are charged with criminal carelessness resulting in death. Both appeared semi-conscious of the proceedings. They had to be held by the sheriff to plead "not guilty." Their hearing was continued until October 12. Bail was fixed at $2,000 each, and in default of bonds they were retawarded.

BRINGS CHOLERA TO AMERICA.

Coal Trimmer on the Moltke Found to Have a True Case.

New York, Oct. 7.—Dr. A. H. Doty, health officer of the port, announced that a bacteriological examination showed that Rudolf Sellitch, a coal trimmer who was removed from the steamship Moltke on Tuesday, is suffering from a true case of cholera. Sellitch is now in the hospital at Swineburne Island.

"Sellitch had had no communication whatever with the cabin passengers," said the doctor, "and his condition is much improved. He may recover."

MICHIGAN G. O. P. INDORSE TAFT.

Payne Tariff Law Comes in for Enthusiastic Praise.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 7.—In spite of what was supposed to have been a sweeping "progressive" victory in the recent Republican primaries, the Republican state convention aligned the party in Michigan on the side of the regulars. It adopted a platform unqualifiedly endorsing President Taft and his administration and endorsing Taft enthusiastically but not the loss certainly the new tariff law.

"The work of the convention in nominating candidates for the state ticket was much less important than usual, the nominees for the most important offices having been selected by the district primary method in September. Francis C. Kuhn was named for attorney general."

AUTO RACE FATAL TO DRIVER.

Cars Collide on Curve—One Killed, Another Mortally Injured.

Des Moines, Ia., Oct. 7.—J. L. Meredith of Mason City, proprietor of the Meredith Automobile company, driving a Hudson machine, was killed, and J. Wallace of Des Moines, driving a Ren was perhaps fatally hurt when their machines ran together on a curve during the automobile race here.

Both machines hit a curve at the same time, and met at an angle completely demolishing both cars. Meredith's wife witnessed the accident from the grand stand.

New York, Oct. 7.—Frank M. Lupton, publisher of the People's Home Journal, and a millionaire, committed suicide by cutting his throat in the bathroom of his home in Brooklyn.

Detroit, Mich., Michigan politics this fall and just in the shadow of the November election present the appearance of the two major parties fighting for honors upon the same platform of the Democratic party. This is the major plank in the Republican platform and so, also in the platform of the Democratic party. Osborn and Lawton T. Hemans, the Democratic candidate.

Two years ago Mr. Hemans made his remarkable run on a platform of anti-warriorism. This year Mr. Osborn won in the primaries on exactly this slogan. Mr. Hemans is keeping up his old wariness and Mr. Osborn will stand upon his pre-primaries declarations. It was this cry which gave Hemans his strength two years ago. What will be the effect of a Republican rallying the same cry?

It is confessed by all close observers of the political situation in Michigan that the fight today is remarkably close. A deep undercurrent of feeling is manifest throughout the agricultural sections of the state which bodes no good to the Republican party. Just how this current is cannot be determined until the votes have been counted. The Democratic declare it is as strong as that tide which swept Mahan from her Republican moorings. The Republicans have reason to believe the threat is not so strong in Michigan.

Mr. Osborn has declared, he will clean out the dishonest machine at Lansing and Mr. Osborn is known to be as good as his word. But on the other hand, there are large numbers who claim that it is only by installing a new party in power that the house cleaning can be assured.

Mr. Hemans, undoubtedly, threw away strong support when he voted his personal convictions against the tonnage tax rather than taking the demanded Grange legislation as a principal plank in his platform. By Mr. Osborn made his primary run.

Mr. Hemans has, therefore, left only throwing this club away he placed himself on the exact platform upon which a general charge of extravagance in the Republican administration which he backs by specific instances and in which he quotes the increased expenditure in the offices of game warden and railroad commissioner under Osborn's administration of those offices.

Added to this he has the cry of Republican dishonesty in office as shown by the impeachment of Glazier and Armstrong and the recent exposure of the administration of A. C. Bird as dirty and fool taking points and adding to the general dissatisfaction with the Republican regime.

But Mr. Osborn is known and recognized as a man of more than ordinary calibre, one of determination and well known integrity. The Republicans declare he will brag about the same result if elected governor as would Mr. Hemans and the Republicans ask the right to wash their own dirty linen.

Mr. Osborn's strength will be first in the upper peninsula which he will sweep with a tremendous majority. He will be strong, too, in the southern valley, in Detroit and in the northern tiers of counties. Two years ago Mr. Hemans went to the Straits of Mackinac with 12,000 plurality. The Republicans feel certain that barring the undercurrent of unrest which none can gauge, Hemans will not have near that strength below the Straits. The Democrats believe that the light vote in the primaries is an indication of unrest and the determination of the stay at home Republicans to vote the Democratic ticket. If they are right in their assertion, Mr. Hemans' chances are exceedingly bright.

The Parable of the Talents, Matt. xxi: 14-30.

Golden Text. His Lord said unto him, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Matt. xxi: 21.

Verse 14—Who does the "man" traveling into a far country represent?

Who do the "servants" stand for?

What do the "talents" here represent?

Verse 15—What is it which God divides among His servants, represented by "talents"?

What rule does God adopt in giving out his talents? (This question must be answered in writing by members of the club.)

What is the evidence which shows that God gives one or more talents to everybody?

Does God give any two men precisely the same gifts, either in kind or quantity? Give your reasons.

How many things are there in nature, mind or matter, precisely alike?

What rule and method does God adopt in giving men differing abilities?

The man in the parable went on a journey and left his servants, all alone, each to do his own manner; to what extent does God treat men that way?

Verse 16-17—What do Christians have to do, to be equivalent to a man trading with his money?

About what per cent of new opportunities are developed, when we are faithful to the original opportunities which God places right before us?

Verse 18—If a man with one talent, representing limited opportunities, had used it, what is the reason for believing that he would have doubled his original capital as did the others?

What sin was this man guilty of?

Why do men with one talent, so often bury it as this man did?

Which class of men as a rule, are the more faithful, those with two, or five talents, or those with one?

Give your reasons.

Verse 19—What evidence is there that there will be a reckoning day for every one of us?

How long before or when, will the reckoning day be?

Verse 20-23—What percentage of profit had they made, and which of the two men were despoiling of the more profits?

Verse 24-27—How do you account for the fact that those who are unfaithful generally put the blame upon God, that is their "chances," their opportunities, and their lack of ability, etc.?

In what way did this man add insult to injury?

Verse 28-29—Why did God create the law that those that have got more, and those that have not generally lose even that which they have?

Verse 30—What is the natural punishment which comes to men who have neglected their opportunities?

Lesson for Sunday, Oct. 16th, 1910. The Last Judgment, Matt. xxv: 1-46.

result that critics have stated that never before has a performance of "Il Trovatore" been given to equal that of the Sheehan Opera Company this year. The role of "Manrico" in "Il Trovatore" is the greatest in Mr. Sheehan's repertoire; in fact, he is the only living tenor today, not excepting Caruso, who takes the high "C" at the end of the "di Quella pira".

Miss Elaine De Sallum, the eminent French contralto, is said to have no equal in the role of "Azucena," the gypsy hag and the entire list of principal parts as well as the well trained chorus have been planned for their special fitness.

The production will be a most elaborate one with special electrical effects in the famous Anvil Chorus.
Mr. Sheehan with his entire company of famous artists and the complete production will be at the Myers Theatre, Thursday, Oct. 11, for a single performance of the world's greatest opera.

A play should entertain and amuse. We all know that. At the same time there should be depth and strength to it. It should instruct along some certain lines. If it lacks this element the players cannot become sufficiently interested in it to do good work. "The Family Arrow" which will be played at Myers Theatre Saturday, Oct. 8, matinee and evening, is one displaying all of the above qualities and a dramatization including a splendid moral.

This theatrical season promises to usher in a new style of entertainment which is very likely to prove a revolution. It is called "French Vaudeville" or "Comedy with Music." "The Girl in the Kimono" which will be presented at the Myers Theatre, Monday, Oct. 10 and which comes here with an established metropolitan reputation, is one of the first of this new type of attraction to be seen on the local stage.

It is a domestic comedy with music, and differs from the musical comedy inasmuch as it requires the services of artists of dramatic ability as well as musical, and it requires a smaller chorus but one comprised of pretty girls who can speak lines intelligently. A typical Ziegfeld production is this new comedy with music, containing a big beauty chorus for which this manager is noted. Ten song hits of popular flavor are introduced during the action of the play.

ASSASSIN ATTEMPTS TO KILL CHINESE PRINCE

Revolutionist is Foiled, as He Draws Pistol to Shoot Tsai Huan.

San Francisco, Oct. 7.—George Fong, a member of the San Francisco organization of the Young China association, an alleged revolutionary body, was arrested by secret service men just as he was about to shoot Prince Tsai Huan, uncle of the emperor of China, who was boarding the steamer Chiao Mu to sail for home.

Fong confessed that he intended to kill the prince.

He was hurried aboard a ferry boat for San Francisco and put in jail.

The prince did not know an attempt had been planned on his life, nor was there any excitement.

The assassin is an American-born Chinese, native of San Francisco and a member of the Young China association, the revolutionary party which has millions of members all over the world.

He is a cook in the Beta Theta Pi fraternity of the University of California, Berkeley. He declares he wanted to kill the prince and become a martyr for his country. He speaks English well and recently has been studying the history of China.

The man discussed himself and his ambitions freely, saying he had no personal grudge against the prince, except that he was a hated Manchian, and that he thought if he could kill him it would wake up the members of young China and precipitate a revolution.

HUGHES RESIGNS AS GOVERNOR.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 7.—Charles E. Hughes retired from the governorship of New York submitting to the legislature a resignation that will take its place as one of the briefest official documents on record. It says:

"To the Legislature: I hereby resign the office of governor."

(Signed) "CHARLES E. HUGHES."

Mr. Hughes immediately left for Washington, where, on Monday, he is to assume the duties of a justice of the United States Supreme court and perhaps later the exalted office of presiding justice, to take the place of the late Chief Justice Fuller.

THE COMING OF PEARL

When the Beasleys tell the story of Pearl they always apologize. An Mrs. Beasley says, you really can't expect people to believe anything which sounds so much like a cheap farce made out of whole cloth.

"If I really did make it up," she adds protestingly, "I'd have invented a story that sounded more reasonable. And how could it ever be reasonable for any girl to be named Pearl Deamblossom? But she was."

"Arthur brought her first letter home to show me so I'd know it was all real. He said he was afraid that otherwise I'd insist he simply had an intoxicated imagination. You see, Pearl wrote from some little village out in Kansas that she wanted to come to Chicago and study music at Arthur's musical college. She said she knew she had talent, because every one told her so, and she was going to make it her life work and would he write her please? As if he were selling suits or hats wholesale, you know!"

"Arthur had quite a correspondence with Pearl. He attended to it himself, instead of turning it over to his secretary. He said he needed mental recreation, anyhow."

"Well, Pearl wrote that she would come and asked Arthur to get her a place to board, as she was a stranger in the city. He had become interested in her, for, in spite of her cheap notepaper and cramped writing and general ignorance, I could tell from her letters that she was sincere. So I found her a room in a nice, respectable boarding house on a side street near us and Arthur sent her the address."

"Then he got a short note from his prospective pupil. She said she would arrive at the Union station the next Wednesday evening and would he please meet her, as she didn't know anything about street cars and where to go!"

"That was a pleasing prospect, spread out before him—dashing madly from gate to gate of the big station all evening trying to watch six or seven trains at once! As Arthur said, the catalogue of the college did not offer the services of the president as train porter for all arriving pupils. Still, I told him that he just had to meet Pearl."

"I knew the wife of an official of one of the roads running into the Union station, so I called up that official on the phone and he was very nice and accommodating. When he found the name of the town where Pearl lived he got out folders and time tables and figured that she had to come on one of two railroads. The evening train of the likeliest of the two roads got in at 8:10."

"We were due at a card party that evening, but Arthur met the train, with a taxicab waiting warranted to break the speed limit. Pearl was not on the train. Therefore Arthur hastened to the card party and dismissed her from his mind."

"Meanwhile Pearl arrived on the unlikely train about nine o'clock. Somehow—goodness knows how—she got to her boarding house. She had that address, you know, though she didn't know the name of the owner. Therefore when the door was opened to her ring about 10:30 she brushed right in past the maid, and when they began asking why she came she merely said that she had come to study music."

"So they decided she was crazy. She was dead tired and scared, you know, and her face was all over train soot and she carried a cheap little bag and wore a badly cut coat and skirt. The more they questioned her the more tangled and bewildered she got and the more they were afraid of her."

"Finally she mentioned Mr. Beasley's name and the maid told her where our house was. The boarding house owner was not in, so nobody knew about the room I had engaged."

"When Pearl rang the door bell at our house and got the maid out of bed that scandalized person, of course, refused to let her in. However, Pearl begged so piteously to be allowed to wait till we came home that the maid finally admitted her and sat up in the kitchen waiting with a carving knife in her hand till we came."

"Arthur let us in with his latch-key. When I stepped into the library and switched on the lights I jumped two feet and shrieked because I saw somebody curled up on the couch. It turned out to be Pearl Deamblossom asleep."

"Well, when Arthur had calmed us both, I turned Pearl into the guest-room and then I couldn't sleep. The shock of discovering her was too much for me, so an hour later I got up and began to prow around, as I've a habit of doing. As I passed the closed guestroom door I had an uneasy feeling that something was wrong, so I opened the door. Then I made one wild rush to fling the window wide and shake Pearl."

"No, she hadn't really blown out the gas, but she had turned it off and then on again, not knowing how to deal with gas."

"I stayed in bed for two days after that awful night. Pearl Deamblossom nearly finished me as well as herself."

"What became of her? Indeed, she isn't a grand opera star or the subject of any fairy story ending like that. Pearl went back to Kansas on Arthur's advice inside of two weeks. He said she didn't have any more voice than a Kansas rabbit!"

"I hope she got married soon and changed her name!"

"When it comes to making a lining for a nest," softly quipped the elder duck, "I've got it down fine."

Thoughts For Housewife.

Love coveth a multitude of sins, and indifference in little things may cover up much love.

If clubs club more nerve force out of you than brain force into you you may some time want to club yourself for belonging to clubs.

When trying to iron out domestic wrinkles have a care that you do not scorch out some one's good nature.

Hold up the mirror to nature—that is, the nature of your husband—and you cannot always hold down his tendency to hold off from holding you in his confidence.

Domestic equilibrium generally depends on the correct balance of the whole matrimonial sketch. When the atmosphere of love is created by the superheating of tempers a cold current of resentment may flow in to fill the vacuum, and sometimes the result is a cyclone of indignation fatal to the affections.

Short tempers and long faces are the rule when you would rule your household with rules.

The good deed in my head availed little unless I will put it on foot.

He'd Learned the Trick.

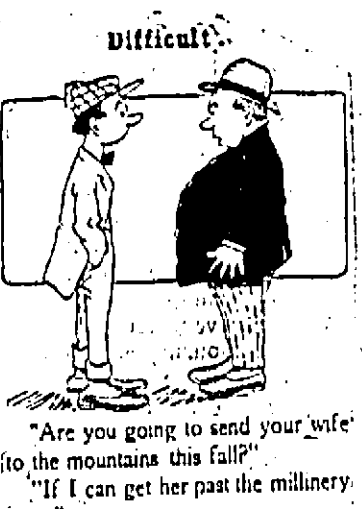

A group of young women connected with a church where a popular young clergyman has recently been installed as assistant recently attended a christening at which he officiated. He had great success with the brides, whom he handled so gently and effectively that the girls stopped in at the old sexton's office in the church afterward and chatted away about it.

"Oh, he had to practice a lot with a dummy baby before he got to doing the trick of holding the kid comfortably," they were told. "In the divinity school where he studied the students had to practice with a rag baby in long clothes, so that is the way our new assistant got to be so perfect."

Fresh pineapple marmalade is delicious with crisp bread. Have you ever tried making this for temporary use from the portions of pineapple but used when served as a first course?

Stew it, having carefully removed eyes and grated it until tender. Then add a pound of sugar to every pint of fruit and boil until it jellies slightly, tested in a saucer. To eat quickly tea boiling is needed, and the flavor is more delicate.

J. PIERPONT MORGAN TO OCCUPY $100,000 BEDROOM.

Million dollar residence erected by the late Alexander McDonald, which has been turned over to J. Pierpont Morgan to occupy during his sojourn at the Episcopal convention.

Chelmsford, O.—Luxury unknown to King Solomon will attend the sojourn of J. Pierpont Morgan, the American financier, when he attends the triennial Episcopal convention in this city during the first three weeks of this month.

It was the wish of the late Alexander McDonald that Mr. Morgan should visit him at this time, and his wishes have been carried out, even though the host has departed this life. His stepdaughters, the Misses Stutz, have tended the invitation to Mr. Morgan and he has accepted and will spend the time at "Dalway."

Among other luxuries will be the most expensive bedroom to be found in Cincinnati, and it is possibly in the United States. It is estimated it cost its owner $100,000 to furnish this room alone. It is as large as the ordinary home, and has genuine Louis XVI furniture throughout. It is hung with rose pink damask tapestry and is decorated, among other things, with three gold cabinets, each filled with antique jewelry and rare bric-a-brac. Mr. Morgan's special servants, who are in Cincinnati to prepare for his coming, say the house will be suited to ever convenience he could wish.

Mr. Morgan will bring with him twenty servants from New York, including Louis Sherry, who has charge of the household affairs.

Every Horse Owner Should Feed Case's Molasses Feed

It is no longer an experiment. Over four hundred farmers in Rock county alone have given this wonderful stock food a thorough trial and there has yet to be a single case reported where it failed to make good. Run down horses, mares or sickly colts are no longer excusable in any stable.

It has been demonstrated beyond a doubt that molasses feed is extremely beneficial to run-down colts, calves and live stock. It only remains for the wide-awake, up-to-date farmer to make every head of live stock he owns produce the utmost in dollars and cents. This can only be done by INTELLIGENT CARE AND FEEDING.

Why not make every head of stock you own earn the utmost? They can only do this by being in PRIME CONDITION and CASE'S MOLASSES FEED WILL DO THE WORK.

The time of year is here, when a good heavy frost will kill off the remaining pasture and the feed problem is staring you in the face.

It will then be up to you to feed your stock the feed that will get the best results at the lowest cost.

Read what Doctor Perschbacher, V. S., of Janesville, one of the best authorities in Southern Wisconsin, has to say:

"I have fed Case's Molasses Feed for over three years and I find it is the best feed for the money I have ever used. I have found it very effective on old horses, mares with foal, sickly colts, and in fact any stock that is in a run-down condition. If it is fed intelligently it will build stock up, fatten horses and enable them to do twice the work on much less feed. Yours truly, J. PERSCHBACHER, V. S."

Case's Molasses Feed is NOT AN EXPENSE BUT IT IS A POSITIVE SAVING to feed it BECAUSE THE INCREASED PROFITS WILL PAY FOR THE SMALL OUTLAY MANY TIMES OVER.

Don't delay, because every dollar you have invested in live stock should be paying you a large dividend. Ask yourself, is it? There is a remedy. Call or write the CONVENTION INDORSES TAFT.

Massachusetts Republican Gathering Approves the Taft Regime.

Boston, Oct. 7.—Precedent ruled the Republican state convention here and Gov. Eben S. Draper was named by acclamation for a third term. It has been many years since a Republican governor has been re-elected a third nomination in this state. All other state officers selected were nominated with the same unanimity.

The platform adopted, besides commending the tariff law and favoring a permanent tariff board, strongly approved the administration of President Taft and favored the conservation of national resources and closer trade relations with Canada.

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 7.—The regular Democratic convention nominated Senator Robert L. Taylor for governor to succeed M. H. Patterson who resigned.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON.

SOMETIMES I give you a little talk on the sympathy that is so exaggerated and unsympathetic that it deserves to be classed with the vice rather than the virtue.

I spoke of the "sympathy" that circulates petitions to get the dangerous degenerate set free from restraint, the sympathy that is unwilling to kill the harmful worm, the sympathy that weakly condones a fault in a child rather than by reproof helps him to correct it.

But with all this spending, I find that I left out one very important brand of false "sympathy."

A correspondent calls my attention to the omission and I'm much obliged.

I refer to the kind that the unmarried man or woman gives to the married person of the opposite sex, who is inclined to feel that he or she is unhappily married.

If this kind of "sympathy" could be filled in the bud, I think there would be a noticeable slipping off in the divorce rate.

Take, for instance, the case of the man—that's the more common, I think. For sometime he has felt a hazy feeling of dissatisfaction with the way things are going at home. He feels that his wife is not the comrade to him that she used to be. She doesn't take the interest in his work that she used to. She doesn't ever go about with him—a piece of selfishness on her part that he might understand better if he could remember that three children and an unmerciful don't make going about a particularly joyful or easy process.

Now this is a bad state of mind, anyway, but if the man who has it, is left alone, in this case out of ten he will probably get over it very comfortably in due time.

But he isn't left alone.

For here the girl with the "sympathetic" disposition appears.

Perhaps she is someone he meets socially. Perhaps she is his stenographer.

Anyway, she is someone he sees often enough for him to get into the habit of telling her things. That isn't so bad, but soon his wife's discrepancies gradually come to be included in these confidences.

Now is the time that a girl with any common sense would know that it was up to her to firmly lead the talk to other subjects, or better still, astonish the man by telling him that, like as not, he is chiefly to blame.

But this girl has a "sympathy" swelling where her bump of common sense ought to be.

She gently "sympathizes" with the man for his failure to find a comrade in his wife—she cleverly pities him for his misfortune on being yoked to so inferior a mate.

And shortly that hazy idea that a little of the romance has gone out of the intercourse between him and his wife becomes a fixed conviction that he is cruelly misreated and misunderstood, and that home is on the highroad towards our great American evil.

And it's one good big bit the fault of that girl's "sympathy."

Of course, the man was at fault in the first place, to speak disparagingly of his wife to another woman.

But that doesn't excuse the girl.

Or make her sympathy any less disgusting.

Yes, on the whole, I think that kind of sympathy has a right to hold up its head with any of the acknowledged vices.

the advancement of the whole city. The measures were unpopular. They themselves lost in friends and standing.

When one woman, high in public work, was appealed to for her influence she said:

"We don't want to pull down or throw any stone on our own institutions."

That was her idea of loyalty. Cover up and hide the sore spots. Do not drag them out into the blessed sunlight of public opinion. Shield them from the scorn of others.

Perhaps that is loyalty—but it sounds mighty like politics. The only way to better conditions is to make plain that they need bettering. The personal element will enter in, if the mass of voters find that they are being "horsewhipped." They will do something—if they see that they should do it.

Loyalty to friends—does that mean merely to lend a hand? Does it mean only to say, "I did word?" Does it mean hiding faults or does it mean helping to cure them?

The old meaning of the word was limited to state and sovereign, husband and wife. It has now been made more elastic and we speak of loyalty in all the relations and correlations of life. But do we ever really define it in its highest and truest sense?

Talk is cheap. Words are unlimited. If in doubt coin a new one and it will be accepted but to be loyal is a big thing. To be so loyal to your state and country—to your city and to your country—to your friend and to your family that you will not shield any one of these in wrong that is, loyalty in the highest sense.

It is after all being loyal to an ideal—but it is a fine high ideal and the world has advanced on the ideals of honest thinkers and hard workers.

There are men and women who are loyal and who give of themselves without stint or hope of reward but they are few. (Are you one of them?)

Spaulding nodded. Duncan went on gloomily, talking a great deal more freely than he would have talked at any other time—suffering, in fact, from that species of auto-hypnosis induced by the sound of his own voice recounting his misfortunes, which seems especially to affect a man down on his luck.

"That smash came when I was five years out of college. I never thought of turning my hand to anything in all that time. I'd always had more coin than I could spend—never had to consider the worth of money or how hard it is to earn. My father saw to all that. He seemed not to want me to work; not that I held that against him. He'd an idea I'd turn out a genius of some sort or other, I believe. Well, he failed and died all in a week, and I found myself left with an extensive wardrobe, expensive tastes, an impractical education and not so much of that that you'd notice it—and not a cent. I was too proud to look to my friends for help in those days—and perhaps that was as well; I sought jobs on my own. Did you ever keep books in a fish market?"

"No," Spaulding's eyes twinkled behind his large, shiny glasses.

"That was the use of my boring you," Duncan made as if to rise, suddenly remembering himself.

"You're not. Go on."

"I didn't mean to. Mostly, I was auto-hypnotized, blundering round, an explanation of Kellogg's kindness to me, in my usual, ineffectual way, but I felt an explanation was due you, as the latest sufferer through his misplaced interest in me."

"Perhaps," said Spaulding, "I am beginning to understand. Go on, I'm interested. About the fish market?"

"Oh, I just happened to think of it as a sample experience, and the last of that particular brand. I sat five weeks and earned every cent of it handling the fish. Kellogg, 'My Lord' cost me $30 and the other $3 afforded me a chance to demonstrate myself as a competent fisherman, paying laundry bills and clothing myself, besides buying lunches and such like small matters. I did the whole thing; you know, one who goes of beer a day and made up my own cigarettes. Never could make up my mind which was the worst. The hours were easy, but didn't have to get to work until five in the morning. I lasted five weeks at that job before I was taken sick. Shows what a great constitution I've got."

"And then?"

"Oh," Duncan roused. "Why, then I fell in with Kellogg again; he found me trying the open air cure on a bench in Washington square. Since then he's been finding me one berth after another. He's a sure enough optimist."

Spaulding shifted uneasily in his chair, affirmed by an impulse whose wisdom he could not doubt. Duncan had assuredly done his case no good by painting his shortcomings in colors so vivid; yet somehow, strangely, Spaulding liked him the better for his open hearted confession.

"Well," Spaulding stammered awkwardly.

"Yes," of course," said Duncan promptly, rising. "Sorry if I tired you."

"What do you mean by 'yes, of course'?"

"That you called me in to fire me—and so that's over with. Only I'd be sorry to have you sore on Kellogg for adding me on you. You see, he believed I'd make good, and so I did in a way at least I hoped to."

"Oh, that's all right," said Spaulding uncomfortably. "The trouble is, you see, we're nothing else open just now, but if you'd really like another chance on the road I'll be glad to speak to Mr. Atwater about it."

"Don't you do it," Duncan commanded him sharply, aghast. "He might say yes. And I simply couldn't accept; it wouldn't be fair to you, Kellogg or myself. It'd be charity, for I've proved I can't earn my wages, and I haven't come to that yet. No," he concluded with determination and picked up his hat.

"Just a minute," Spaulding held him with a gesture. "You're forgetting something—at least I am. There's a month's salary coming to you. The cashier will hand you the check as you go out."

"A month's pay?" Duncan said blankly. "How's that? I've drawn up to the end of this week already, if you didn't know it."

"Of course I know it. But we never let our men go without a month's notice or its equivalent, and—"

"No," Duncan interrupted firmly. "not that thank you just the same. I couldn't—I really couldn't. It's good of you, but— Now," he broke off abruptly. "I've left my accounts, what there is of them, with the bookkeeping department, and the checks for my sample trunk. There'll be a row dollars coming to me on my expense account, and I'll send you my address as soon as I get one."

"But, look here," Spaulding got to his feet, frowning.

"No," reiterated Duncan positively, "there's no use. I'm grateful to you for your toleration of me and all that, but we can't do anything better now than call it all off. Goodby, Mr. Spaulding."

Spaulding nodded, accepting defeat with the better grace because of an innate conviction that it was just as well after all. And, furthermore, he admired Duncan's stand; so he offered his hand—an unusual condescension. "You'll make good somewhere yet," he asserted.

"I wish I could believe it," Duncan's grasp was then since he felt more assured of social humanity latent in his late employer. "However, goodbye."

"Good luck to you," rang in his ears as the other put a period to the interview. He stopped and took up the battered suit case and rusty overcoat which he had left outside the Junior partner's office, then went on, shaking his head. "Much obliged," he said huskily to himself. "But what's the good of that? There's no room anywhere for a professional failure, and that's what I am—just a no-account well. I never realized what that meant really before, and it's certainly taken me a damn' long time to find out. But I know now, all right."

Dependently he went down to the sidewalk and merged himself with the crowd, moving with it, though a thousand miles apart from it, and presently diverging, struck across town toward the West street subway station.

"And the worst of it is he's too sharp not to find it out—if he hasn't by this time—and too decent by far to let me know if he has. It can't go on this way with us. I can't let him, God to break with him somehow—now—today. I won't let him think me what I've been all along to him. Bless his foolish heart!"

There was no deprecation of Kellogg's goodness in his mood; simply determination no longer to be a charge upon it. To contemplate the sum total of the benefits he had received at Kellogg's hands since the day when the latter had found him ill and half starved, friendless as a stray pup, on the bench in Washington square staggered his imagination.

He could never repay it, he told himself, save inadequately. Little by little—mostly by gratitude and such consideration as he possessed now to exhibit by removing himself and his distresses from the other's ken. Here was an end to comfort for him, an end to Kellogg's kindness, an end to Kellogg's food, his money, his servants, spending his money, not so much borrowed as pressed upon him.

There crawled in his mind a clammy memory of the sort of housing he had known in past days, and he shuddered inwardly, shuddering again the effort of dark cloths and musty carpets, of dishcloths and fried ham, of old style plumbing and of a week's humanity in the unwholesome raw, the odor of misery that permeated the lodgings to which his lack of means had introduced him. He could see again, and with a painful vividness of mental vision, the degenerate "brownstone fronts" that mask those haunts of wretchedness, with their flights of crumbling brownstone steps leading up to open portals haggard with sickening paint, flanked by squares of soiled wall paper upon which inept hands had traced the warning, not "Abandon hope all who enter here," but "Pur. abled rooms to let with board."

And to this he must return, to that (remnant) of blighted days and tedious nights must set his face.

The one thing he found most difficult to accept was her conduct with Willard. Those other charges against the girl were vague and shadowy, but this was concrete, and he was familiar with every miserable detail of it. It took all his courage to face it, but he swore savagely that if the conditions had been reversed Cherry would not have faltered for an instant. Moreover, what she had done had been done for love of him. It was worse than vile to hesitate. Her past was her own, and all he could rightfully claim was her future. He shut his teeth and laid his course resolutely for her landing, striving to leave behind this one hideous memory, centering his mind upon the girl herself and shutting out her past. It was the bitterest fight he had ever waged. But when he reached the shore and found his skiff he was exalted by the knowledge that he had triumphed; that this painful episode was locked away with all the others.

Now that he had conquered he was filled with a consuming eagerness. As he stole up through the shadows he heard her playing, and when he drew nearer he recognized the notes of that song that had blushed his own black devotion on the night of their first meeting. He paused outside the open window and saw by the shaded lamp-light that she was playing from memory, her fingers wandering over the keyboard without conscious effort. Then she took up the words with all the throbbing tenderness that lives in a deep contralto voice:

Last night I was dreaming of thee, love— I dreamed thou didst promise—

Cherry paused as if entranced, for she thought she heard another voice join with hers. Then she bowed her head and sobbed in utter wretchedness, knowing it for nothing more than her own fancy. Too many times, as in other twilight moods, she had heard that mellow voice blend with hers, only to find that her ears had played her false and she was alone with a memory that would never die.

Of all the days of her life this was the saddest, this hour the loneliest, and the tears she had withheld so bravely as long as there was work to do came now in unbidden profusion.

To face those people on the night had been an act of pure devotion to duty, for her every instinct had rebelled against it. Yet she had known that some desperate stroke in her defense must be delivered instantly; otherwise the ruin of his hopes would follow. She had hit upon the device of using Constantine and Chakawana largely by chance, for not until the previous day had she learned the truth.

"BECAUSE I LOVE YOU."

She had not dared to hope for such unqualified success, nor had she foreseen the tragic outcome. She had simply carried her plan through to its natural conclusion. Now that her work was done she gave way completely and wept like a little girl. He was out there now, with his love. They would never waste a thought upon that other girl who had made their happiness possible. The thought was almost more than she could bear. Never again could she have loved to herself, never enjoy his careless friendship as of old. Even that was over now that he knew the truth.

The first and only kiss he had ever given her burned fresh upon her lips. She recalled that evening they had spent alone in this very room, when he had seemed to waver and her hopes had risen at the dawning of a new light in his eyes. At the memory she cried aloud as if her heart would break:

"Lord! Lord!"

He entered noiselessly and took her in his arms.

"Yes, dear," he murmured. But she rose with a startled exclamation and wrenched herself from his embrace. The piano gave forth a discordant crash. Shrieking back as from an apparition, she stared into his drenched and smiling face, then breathed:

"Tut! Why are you here?"

"Because I love you."

She closed her eyes and away as if under the spell of wonderful music. He saw the throbbing pulse at her throat. Then she flung out her hands, crying piteously:

"Go away, please, before I find it is only another dream."

She raised her lids to find him still standing there, then felt him with his fering fingers.

"Our dreams have come true," he said gently and strove to imprison her hand.

"No, no!" Her voice broke wildly. "You don't mean it. You—you haven't come to stay."

"I have come to stay if you will let me, dear."

She broke from his grasp and moved quickly away.

"Why are you here? I left you out there with—her. I made your way clear. Why have you come back? What more can I do? Dear God, what more can I do?" She was panting as if desperately frightened.

"There is but one thing more you can do to make me happy. You can be my wife."

"But I don't understand!" She shook her head hopelessly. "You are jangling with me. You love Miss Wayland."

"No. Miss Wayland leaves tonight, and I shall never see her again."

"Then you won't marry her?"

"No."

A dull color rose to Cherry Malotte's cheeks. She swallowed as if her throat were very dry and said slowly:

"Then she refused you in spite of everything and you have come to me because of what I told you this afternoon. You are doing this out of pity, or is it because you are angry with her? No, no, Lloyd! I won't have it. I don't want your pity; I want love."

"It has taken me a long time to find myself, Cherry, for I have been blinded by a vision," he answered. "I have been dreaming, and I never saw clearly till today. I came away of my own free will, and I came straight to you because it is you I love and shall always love."

She cried in a voice that tore her lover's heartstrings. "You can't want to marry me!"

"Tonight," he said simply and held out his arms to her. "I love you and I want you. That is all I know or care about."

He found her upon his breast, sobbing and shaking as if she had sought shelter there from some great peril. He buried his face in the soft masses of her hair, whispering fondly to her (all her emotion spent itself. She turned her face shyly up at length and pressed her lips to his. Then, holding herself away from him, she said, with a half doubtful yet radiant look:

"It is not too late yet. I will give you one final chance to save yourself."

He shook his head.

"Then I have done my duty," she murmured, closing to him. "And you have no regrets?"

"Only one. I am sorry that I can't give you more than my name. I may have to go out into the world and begin all over if Mr. Wayland carries out his threat. I may be the poorest of the poor."

"That will be my opportunity to show how well I love you. You can be my poorer than I in this world's goods."

"You at least have your copper mine."

"I have no mine," said the girl, "not even the smallest interest in one."

"But I don't understand."

She dropped her eyes. "Mr. Willard is a hard man to deal with. I had to give him all my share in the claims."

"I suppose you mean you sold out to him."

"Not when I found you could not raise the money I gave him my share in the mine. With that as a consideration he made you the loan. You are not angry, are you?"

"Angry?" Emerson's tone conveyed a supreme gladness. "You don't know how happy you have made me."

"Hark!" She laid a finger upon his lips. Through the breathless night there came the faint rumble of a ship's chimes.

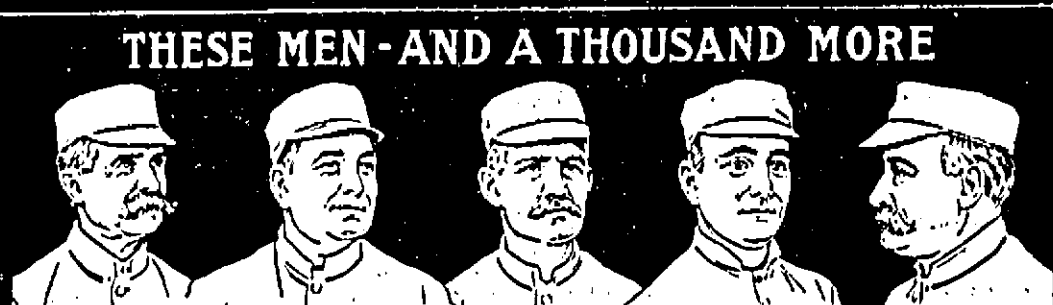

"The Grande Dame!" he cried. "She sails at the flood tide!"

They stood together in the open doorway of the little house and watched the yacht's lights as they described a great curve through the darkness, then slowly faded into nothingness down the bay. Cherry drew herself closer to Lloyd.

"What a wonderful Providence guides us, after all," she said. "That girl had everything in the world maladjusted in a lonely vigil at the rail, straining with tragic eyes until the somber shadows that marked the shores of the land she feared had shrunk to a faint, low lying streak on the horizon. Then she turned and went before, numbing by the knowledge that she was very poor and very wretched and had never understood."
